CAMP-FIRES.

McKinley and Cleveland Speak to

ENTHUSIASM EVERYWHERE

Veterans Still Have a Warm Spot in the Hearts of Former Fellow

Soldiers of the Same Unit.

Short Speech by Major McKinley to the Uniformed Section of the War

Veterans of the United States.

The President's speech was enthusiastic, and was received by the men with the greatest pleasure.

The President spoke of the importance of the meeting, and the need for the veterans to remember their duty to their country.

The meeting was well attended,

and the veterans were enthusiastic in their response.

The President ended his speech with a warm

wisdom, and the veterans

left the meeting

with renewed

enrollment.

ENGLISH.

MET ONCE MORE.

Many Comrades Sked Hands

With Each Other for the

First Time in Years.

DAY OF JOYFUL REUNIONS

Harvest of Scenes of Reunion

from All Sections of the Country Together.

Three Years ago, matching

bands, and the right

hands of composite ban,

were held in common other.

President McKinley, speaking in the city

Hall, said that the reunion of the veterans was a fitting celebration of the three-year anniversary of the end of the War.

He spoke of the importance of the reunion,

and of the need for

the veterans to

remember their

duty to their country.

The President ended his

speech with a warm

wisdom, and the veterans

left the meeting

with renewed

enrollment.

English.

GRAND PARADE.

Naval Veterans, Ex-prisoners,

County Survivors and

School Boys.

FOUR THOUSAND IN LINE

Every Naval Battle of the War

Was Represented in the Parade Presented to the Gathering.

It was a brilliant presentation,

supported by the

veterans, who were in

high

spirits.

The parade

was

a fitting celebration of the

three-year anniversary of the end of the War.

The parade

was

a fitting celebration of the

three-year anniversary of the end of the War.

The parade

was

a fitting celebration of the

three-year anniversary of the end of the War.