Final Project Directions

As indicated in your syllabus there is a final project due for this class. This assignment is worth 50 points and is due as a Word e-mail attachment not later than 11 May.

For this assignment you will be required to produce a unit similar to the ones you have been working on all semester. This means that you must identify a Core Topic, an associated question and a template answer to that question. You will also need to identify a Current Topic that relates in some way to the Core topic. Again for the Current Topic you must provide the question and template answer to accompany it.

The Core topic you select may be one we have already used, but you should locate additional material to assign for that unit. The question must be different from that which I assigned.

The Current topic must be one we have not covered this semester.

Therefore, the packet I receive by the 11th of May should contain:

- The Core Topic and links to the material the students would need to learn about that topic
- The question related to the Core Topic
- What you consider to be a template or exemplary answer to that question
- The Current Topic and links to the material the students would need to learn about that topic
- The question related to the Current Topic
- What you consider to be a template or exemplary answer to that question

Please note that I have updated the list of assignments available from the class site to include the topics for the remainder of the semester.

While the final project is due not later than 11 May you may submit it earlier if you complete it. You may also send me your ideas for topics if you want to be sure you are on the correct track.

Remember – they must relate to psychology and not simply politics, education or curriculum or some other unrelated area.

Let me know if you have any questions about this assignment.
